

BARBIER GROUP

The planet is facing a new challenge in the form of plastic and other waste that humans are spilling into the oceans. Our industry is accepting its share of responsibility to improve quality of life for everyone.

The Barbier Group is committed to protecting our environment and intends to play an active, responsible role in the fight against raw material pellet losses. All of our companies' employees have to receive appropriate training on handling plastic pellets with the goal of zero losses. We specifically want to raise awareness, train and involve our personnel and suppliers in our environmental process. With the "zero pellet loss" target, the Barbier Group is working for a more sustainable value chain. In our day-to-day role, one of the most effective ways of improving pellet confinement on our facilities is to post where spillages and losses most often occur and rectify them. To do so, we're always looking at the acceptance, storage and handling of raw materials. We have to make sure that our employees know and are responsible for prevention, confinement, cleaning and eliminating losses of pellets. Monitoring and applying procedures, making regular inspections of production sites and seeking to improve our pellet loss prevention are daily tasks and priorities.
